Dear Ms. Briggs:

Thank you for your letter of 19 October 1984. We appreciate your interest in courses offered by the Information Systems Training Division, formerly named the Information Science Center. The publication you cited in your letter is, unfortunately, out of date concerning most of our course offerings. Only two of the courses listed are now being offered by us: CAMS Language and Functions, and Survey of Intelligence Information Systems. Our experience has indicated that the other courses listed either were more appropriately taught by other training organizations or were no longer needed by sufficient numbers of students to justify their continuation.

Based on your letter, I believe that the Survey of Intelligence Information Systems course would be more pertinent to your interests. The length of this course has been shortened to two weeks and the eligibility range changed to GS-11 through 15 civilians and military officers of equivalent grades; other pertinent information in the publication you cited remains correct. Spaces are still available in the 4-15 March and 3-14 June 1985 runnings of this course. No further runnings have been scheduled for calendar years 1985 or 1986.

Please call [REDACTED]
should you desire additional information concerning course dates, prerequisites, and application and security requirements. I trust that this information will meet your needs.

Sincerely,
